A NATION IS MADE GREAT BY THE BEAUTY IT PRODUCES

A CITY, a state or a nation becomes prosperous, achieves fame or lives in history directly through the things it produces. It is not enough that we have rich resources of materials, money and men. We must make the highest use of them here and now or let others elsewhere profit by our ignorance.

Florence, Paris, Athens did not build their riches, beauty and fame upon imported workmanship.

The West can only achieve her plane in the higher development of the new nation through the things we create through using the designers' good taste and fine design in the goods we produce, through using our architects, sculptors, painters, craftsmen, poets and musicians to beautify and enhance our lives today.

It is very well to encourage, enjoy and purchase the work of Milan's Leonardo, but if you are a true Florentine your own Michael Angelo will be given the first opportunity to show his skill, for upon him alone your city's fame depends.

A city is judged as an art center by the fine things it produces. If you would add to the fame of some other region, buy their artists' work. This exhibition is planned that you may know the worth of the artists of your own region.

And if we chance to say their work is not good enough for us, it is nevertheless better than we deserve for we shall never have better until through our purchases we create the demand.

There could have been no Michael without his Medici.

NOTES ON APPRECIATING This EXHIBITION

EVERY work shown here is a deliberate expression of some aspect of life the enjoyment of which the artist desires to share with us. A jury of three experts passed each work as having a message sufficiently expressed to be worthy of our attention. Our part consists of following the artist in the realms of the sensibilities, the emotions and intelligence and enjoying the experiences revealed to us. The wide variety of messages, however, makes it difficult for the young art appreciator to get the full meaning of all work shown, although the judges have said of each "this is worthy of your consideration."

Failure to appreciate and enjoy any work of art is not the fault of the artist but is rather often due to lack of experience and breadth on the part of the beholder. It is the essence of art appreciation that we give an artist credit for what he has expressed according to his own aims, rather than judge his work by standards of what we, who are not artists, expected him to do. The greatest error we can make is to condemn a work without attempting to comprehend the artist's intention. As yet our artists are too busy with objective beauty to have revealed the true significance of American life which will some time reveal the soul of America and inspire us to higher accomplishments.

AN EXHIBITION OF RECENT WORK BY THE SOCIETY OF ILLUSTRATORS

Arranged Through the American Federation of Arts

THROUGH the medium of the printed page more beauty is brought to our people today than anyone ever enjoyed in the golden age. A few people still argue that illustration is not one of the fine arts, but it is a fact that many of the so-called "old masters" made numerous illustrations and even caricatures (the commercial art of their time), either for their own amusement or for the publishers of their time. The names of Durer, Leonardo, Reubens, Rembrandt and others, including such modern men as Whistler and Brangwyn, are to be found among those in this field.

All the greatness of a great easel picture is often found in the illustrations of our best magazines and it is interesting to study at first hand the work of prominent men in the field, especially if we compare the originals with the reproductions. Many of the works are for sale.
